Lillian Wald Symposium

WHAT IS A LIVING WAGE?

MAKING ENDS MEET IN NYC

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 2022, AT 6:30 P.M.

Henry Street Settlement is situated on the Lenape island of Manhahtaan (Mannahatta) in Lenapehoking, the Lenape homeland. We pay respect to Lenape peoples, past, present, and future, and their continuing presence in the homeland and throughout the Lenape diaspora. We offer our care and gratitude to the land, water, and air of Lenapehoking.

Nulelìntàmuhëna èli paèkw Lenapehoking Kulawsihëmo ènta ahpièkw. Nooleelundamuneen eeli payeekw Lunaapeewahkiing. Wulaawsiikw neeli apiyeekw.

We are glad because you people came to Lenapehoking.
Live well when you are here.

Thank you to the Lenape Center and Emily Johnson for their partnership with Abrons Arts Center in developing this land acknowledgment.

MEET OUR PANEL

Maura Cuffie is a facilitator, strategist, and designer. She is the director of strategic initiatives for the Guaranteed Income program at Creatives Rebuild New York. From 2018 to 2021, she was the senior program officer for ArtPlace America. During that time she conceived and executed the Local Control, Local Field(s) initiative, a novel approach to participatory and trust-based philanthropy. As a co-founder of the Free Breakfast Program collective, she participated as a Create Change Fellow with the Laundromat Project in 2015 and in the inaugural cohort for leaders of color in EmcArts' Arts Leaders as Cultural Innovators Fellowship in 2016.

Tsedeye Gebreselassie is director of work quality at the National Employment Law Project, where she researches, develops, and promotes policies that raise job standards and expand workplace protections for immigrant workers and workers in low-wage jobs. She received her law degree magna cum laude from New York University School of Law, where she was a Root-Tilden-Kern public interest scholar and articles editor on the Review of Law and Social Change, and received her BA magna cum laude from Brown University. Before joining NELP, Tsedeye clerked for the Honorable Ellen Bree Burns of the U.S. District Court of Connecticut. Prior to law school, she worked as a labor and community organizer for New York's Working Families Party.

Raysa Rodriguez is chief program and policy officer for the FPWA, overseeing the organization's policy-reform efforts and supporting nonprofit partners that serve New Yorkers. Raysa has more than 20 years of experience in government and nonprofit leadership, management, and service. Most recently, she was associate executive director for policy & advocacy at Citizens' Committee for Children. As vice president of policy and planning at WIN, the largest provider of family shelter and supportive housing in New York City, Raysa led efforts to improve outcomes for families experiencing housing insecurity. She served as United Way of New York City's associate vice president for education and was a deputy mayor and senior advisor under Mayor Bloomberg's administration, working to reduce child poverty and improve education and health outcomes. A former public school teacher, Raysa earned a BS from Cornell University and an MSW from Columbia University, where she is an adjunct professor.

Paul Sonn is the state policy program director at the National Employment Law Project, a workers' rights research and advocacy organization headquartered in New York City. He has helped support campaigns for higher minimum wages across the United States, including the Fight for $15, and other efforts to strengthen protections for workers. Prior to joining NELP, he was co-director of the Economic Justice Project at New York University's Brennan Center for Justice and assistant counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. He has been a lecturer in law at Columbia Law School and is a graduate of Yale Law School and Dartmouth College.

Samir Sonti is an assistant professor in the CUNY School for Labor & Urban Studies. He holds a BS in economics from the Wharton School and a BA in political science from the University of Pennsylvania. He earned his PhD in history from the University of California, Santa Barbara, with a concentration in 20th century U.S. labor and political economy. He has worked as a political organizer for the Pennsylvania Association of Staff Nurses and Allied Professionals and as a researcher for UNITE HERE, a union representing hospitality workers in the United States and Canada. Prior to arriving at CUNY, he served as a special advisor on the presidential campaign of Sen. Bernie Sanders. Samir is expanding his dissertation, "The Price of Prosperity: Inflation and the Limits of the New Deal Order," for publication. Since 2019, he has been the Books and Arts Editor of the CUNY School for Labor & Urban Studies' New Labor Forum.
